POLITICS IN DENTISTRY AND
WHY YOU SHOULD GIVE A DAMN

Webster defines politics as “the activities, actions, and policies that are used to gain and hold power in a government.” That simply means it’s the way people living in groups make decisions—what we would call rules and laws. As much as we may try to avoid being political, we have got to be proactive and vigilant in our endeavors to preserve the way in which we practice the profession of dentistry. Here are a few quotes pertinent to this topic:

“Politics is not a game, but serious business.”
–Winston Churchill

“Politics determines who has the power, not who has the truth.”
–Paul Krugman

“Just because you do not take an interest in politics doesn’t mean politics won’t take an interest in you.”
–Pericles

“The heaviest penalty for declining to rule is to be ruled by someone inferior to yourself.”
–Plato

We’re in a difficult and vitally important political season of our dental life and it’s certainly not going to get any less difficult. Whether you choose to accept it or not, there are entities at work that want to take control of our profession for their own personal gains, without any concerns for the patients we diligently serve. We must support legislators who support our agenda for good laws that protect both dentists and patients. If we refuse to pay up (make contributions to GDAPAC) and/or speak up (attend legislative receptions and LAW days), someone else will. Most legislators don’t know enough about dentistry to make an educated decision or to vote on legislation regulating our profession. They can easily be misled by big money and loud voices. If we remain conservative with our contributions and silent with our tongues, the legislators will have no other choice but to follow what corporate lobbyists are spouting. If we didn’t do our part and things go south, the only ones we’ll have to blame are ourselves.

How would it feel to wake up one morning to find dentists are subject to a 2% licensing fee (tax) on your gross production? Imagine the panic if a law were passed mandating that every X-ray imaging device must be inspected and a new tax stamp would have to be purchased for each device! The scary thing is, these are actual examples of what has been proposed in the past.

The Governmental Affairs team and GDA staff can't fight this fight alone. They desperately need the members’ support and help, both financially and physically. I’m not a math major or CPA, but according to my calculations, if each of our 3,500+ GDA members contributed just $50 we would have over $175,000 in our campaign contribution fund. And if we could grow our GDA LAW Day’s participation by 10%, our voice and presence at the Capitol would grow exponentially. We're in a very difficult election cycle. Many of the legislators who have been a friend to the GDA are in danger of losing their respective campaigns. A drastic change in government officials could have devastating effects on dentistry as we know it.

So, here’s the thing. Whether we like it or not, politics is a large part of practicing dentistry in Georgia. A good analogy would be that we're in a big football game and it's late in the fourth quarter. The game is tied, we have the ball deep in our own territory and now it's third down. It's crunch time! So, what are you going to do? I think it’s time we all get off the bench and do something!
FROM THE GC’S DESK

Each month we publish responses to some of the more frequently asked questions by GDA members. We hope you and your staff find this column to be a useful resource.

SCOTT LOFRANCO
GDA General Counsel &
VP of Government Affairs

Q:
A father accompanied his minor child/patient to the dental appointment, but then my staff received an angry call from the patient’s mother (the parents are divorced) threatening to sue the office if we treated the child. What do we do?

This is one of the more frequent questions I receive at the GDA office on the issue of minor patient consent and usually involves instances where the minor patient’s parents are separated/in the middle of a divorce/divorced and are on bad terms with one another. One parent brings the child in for treatment without the other’s prior knowledge, and somehow the other parent finds out and calls the office saying that s/he does not consent to the dentist treating the patient. Which parent controls in this situation?

Unfortunately, these disputes place both minor patient and the dentist in an awkward spot, and when I receive such calls, my response to the dentist is that “it depends.” Georgia law states that any parent may consent for medical treatment for his minor child. See O.C.G.A. § 31-9-2 (2019). However, the waters become a little murkier when a divorce is involved, and it becomes apparent that there is a custody issue.

In divorce proceedings, if the parents cannot reach an amicable agreement regarding the custody of minor children and how decisions relating to their healthcare will be made, the court will typically intervene, and the judge may issue an order addressing the issue that keeps the best interests of the children in mind. If such a dispute arises in your practice, you may wish to consider politely asking the parents to resolve this dispute before you agree to treat or continue to treat the minor patient. If your staff is able to confirm that a court order exists, you should ask for a copy of the order so that you can review it and determine who has been granted authority over the minor patient’s healthcare decisions. You may discover that neither parent has the authority, and the court awarded it to a family member or other third-party!

If you have any questions about the information in this column, please email scott@gadental.org or call the GDA office at 404.636.7553 x103.
Q: Can a minor child who drives herself to a dental appointment consent to treatment I provide in my office?

Generally speaking, no. In Georgia, the age of majority is 18. See O.C.G.A. § 39-1-1 (2019). As such, it is important to educate your front office staff that if the patient is under the age of 18, the patient usually cannot consent for the treatment received in your office. Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 31-9-2, the following persons are “authorized and empowered to consent, either orally or otherwise, to any surgical or medical treatment or procedures not prohibited by law…”:

- Any parent for his or her minor child;
- Any person standing in loco parentis, whether formally serving or not, for the minor under his or her care; and any guardian, for his or her ward.

As you can see, Georgia’s medical consent statute is fairly broad and allows (1) any parent; (2) any person standing in loco parentis1 (formally or informally); and (3) any guardian to provide oral or written consent for the minor’s treatment. In most cases, a minor patient’s legal guardians will be her parents, either of whom can provide consent for treatment. See O.C.G.A. § 31-9-2 (2019). While the statute does not require it, your staff should use their best efforts to obtain written consent from the proper party prior to the appointment and include it in the patient’s treatment record if the minor patient is unaccompanied. Front office staff should also be trained not to assume that the adult accompanying the minor patient to the appointment is the patient’s parent/guardian and should ask questions/obtain additional information to more accurately determine if the accompanying adult is able to provide consent for treatment provided that day.

One of the main exceptions to this rule is if the minor patient has been legally emancipated. This means that even though the person is a minor, Georgia law will recognize that person as an adult with regard to certain personal decisions including, “the right to authorize his or her own preventive health care, medical care, dental care, and mental health care, without parental knowledge or liability.” See O.C.G.A. § 15-11-727 (b) (7) (2019). Legal emancipation can occur pursuant to: (a) A court order; or (b) By operation of law as a result of (1) a valid marriage; (2) when the child reaches the age of 18; or (3) when the child is on active duty military service. See O.C.G.A. § 15-11-720 (2019). Although Georgia’s medical consent statute does provide a good faith exception for providers2 if you have a minor patient who claims she has been legally emancipated, you should strongly consider not treating that patient until she provides you with copies of the legal documentation supporting this claim. Most importantly, make sure your staff adds this paperwork to her treatment record on file at your office!

Another key consideration when dealing with minor patients is to make sure your intake paperwork and patient update questionnaires ask the patient to identify and provide updated contact information for her parents/legal guardian(s). Finally, as a practical matter, you should also be wary of relying on “blanket consents for treatment” from patients (both minors and adults). Given today’s complex legal climate, it is vital that you advise the patient and get informed consent for every procedure performed in your office, no matter how simple you feel it is. If you need assistance with updating this process in your office, I would strongly recommend contacting Medical Protective’s risk management department at 800.463.3776; option 4; then press 1 and ask for risk management. For non-MedPro policy holders, you may wish to inquire with your malpractice carrier for tips.

1. “In loco parentis’ means a quasi-parental relationship inferred from and implied by the fact that a child or youth has been taken into a family and treated like any other member thereof, unless an express contract exists to the contrary.” O.C.G.A. § 49-5-3(10) (2019).

2. “No hospital or other health care facility, health care provider, or other person or entity shall be subject to civil or criminal liability or discipline for unprofessional conduct solely for relying in good faith on any direction or decision by any person reasonably believed to be authorized and empowered to consent under subsection (a) of this Code section even if death or injury to the patient ensues. Each hospital or other health care facility, health care provider, and any other person or entity who acts in good faith reliance on any such direction or decision shall be protected and released to the same extent as though such person had interacted directly with the patient as a fully competent person.” O.C.G.A. § 31-9-2(d)(1) (2019).

Healthy Mouth, Healthy Me! PR Campaign

In March GDA will launch an integrated marketing communications program called Healthy Mouth, Healthy Me! to communicate the simple message that a healthy mouth is important to overall health. The campaign will feature Georgians who have benefited from oral health visits and their GDA member dentists. It will include a series of digital ads, a statewide media tour featuring GDA member dentists and their patients, and materials for GDA members to help spread the word.

Healthy Mouth, Healthy Me! PR campaign nominees and their dentists participated in photo shoots which took place in Atlanta on October 25 and Savannah on November 8. Over 20 patients were photographed representing a balance of age, gender and ethnicity.

Fellow GDA members,

As many of you know, my father, Dr. James Hall, recently passed away. During his last weeks he and I discussed establishing a scholarship in his memory at the dental college in Augusta. Daddy was the recipient of several scholarships when he started Northwestern years ago. These scholarships significantly helped ease the financial burden of advanced education. Daddy was moved to tears when I brought this idea to him. On behalf of my family, I would encourage you all to consider a donation in his memory.

We humbly thank all of you for the outpouring of support we have received.

Respectfully,

Dr. Jennifer Hall

Dental Plan Repricing Targets Out-of-Network Dentists

Some dental plans may hire repricing companies to negotiate lower fees with non-contracted dentists. These companies offer quicker payment in return for a discounted fee. If you get a notice with an offer like this, you aren’t obligated to accept. If you are interested in giving the discount to get paid faster, you don’t have to accept their first offer. The repricing company may be willing to negotiate the discount with you.

The repricing company has a certain amount of time, usually 10 to 12 days, to get you to accept the discount. If they don’t hear from you in that time, the claim reverts back to the dental plan and is processed as a normal out-of-network submission. If you tell the repricing company that you are not interested, the repricing company notifies the dental plan sooner and the plan can process the out-of-network submission faster, so you may want to respond even if you don’t want to accept the discounted fee.

Plans often hire more than one repricing company to handle a specific claim. You should determine if the offer is for a specific claim or for all future claims from that payer.

New ADA Guideline Advises Against Using Antibiotics To Manage Most Dental Pain, Swelling

The ADA News reported a new ADA guideline indicates that, “antibiotics are not needed to manage most dental pain and intraoral swelling associated with pulpal and periapical infections.” The guideline, published in the November issue of The Journal of the American Dental Association, “advises against using antibiotics for most pulpal and periapical conditions and instead recommends only the use of dental treatment and, if needed, over-the-counter pain relievers such as acetaminophen or ibuprofen.” The article added that “if a patient’s condition progresses to showing signs or symptoms of systemic involvement, such as fever or malaise, then dentists should prescribe antibiotics, the guideline advises.” The article noted, “The ADA’s guideline is part of larger efforts across the globe to prevent antibiotics from becoming ineffective in treating bacterial infections.”

Performing certain procedures during the delivery of healthcare can place the worker to the risk of exposure to blood, bloody secretions, or other body fluids. Once an exposure occurs, fast action is required on the part of many people in the practice. This is truly an example of the need for preplanning and education of all staff at risk.

Before moving on to the process of responding to an exposure, addressing prevention is always important in the over-all review. Prevention must be at the top of your priority list and should include training on the appropriate use of personal protective equipment, use of engineering controls including safety devices, and appropriate surface disinfection. Worker safety should be a part of the culture in every practice and as such may lead to the prevention of an exposure event.

Potential routes of exposure include:
- Stick with a contaminated needle.
- Stick with a contaminated sharp object, for example, scalers, surgical instruments, or scalpel blades.
- Splash to the mucous membranes of the eyes, nose, mouth.
- Splash to non-intact skin.

Once the exposure occurs the clock literally starts ticking. Employees must know the correct measures to take, and how and to whom to report the incident. Your practice should have a healthcare provider identified in advance who can provide an immediate medical evaluation and counseling of your worker and testing of the source patient.

When establishing the relationship for the healthcare provider consider the following items in your selection process.
- Ease of access for both the worker and the source patient.
- Potential wait times to be seen.
- Ability to obtain the rapid HIV test for the source patient.
- Availability of post exposure medication if indicated for the employee.
Source Patient Testing Process
Practices must have a process identified for source patient testing. After informing the patient of the exposure, immediate access to care is necessary. In some states, post exposure testing of the source patient is required by law and written consent is not required, while in other states, the source patient may be allowed the leeway to decline testing.

1. A Rapid HIV test is the standard of care in an exposure situation and should be utilized if available. If rapid HIV is not available, expedite the HIV test. Post exposure prophylaxis (PEP) for the exposed worker, if necessary, should begin within hours for maximum effectiveness, according to the latest CDC guidance.

2. Hepatitis B Surface Antigen (HBsAG).

3. Anti-Hepatitis C virus (Anti-HCV).

4. The results of the source patient tests must be made available to the physician providing treatment to the exposed employee. Additionally, forward the results to any physician as requested by the source patient.

As a reminder, the cost of all source patient testing is the responsibility of the practice.

Care of the Exposed Employee
The employee should immediately wash the affected area with soap and water or flush the mucous membranes with copious amounts of water. As soon as the first step is completed, the event should be reported. Follow these steps for the benefit of the exposed employee.

- Complete an incident report identifying the route(s) of exposures and the circumstances under which the exposure incident occurred.
- Make a confidential medical evaluation available immediately and follow-up, post exposure prophylaxis if indicated, and counseling by a qualified healthcare provider. This step is Bloodborne Pathogen standard.

- Obtain employee consent to treatment and any bloodwork which may be completed. If the worker does not choose to receive testing or treatment, employers must get a signed declination of care to document that care was offered.

As a reminder, the cost of all source patient testing is the responsibility of the practice.

Hopefully, an employee in your practice will never experience an exposure event, but advance planning and training can ensure care is provided to both the source patient and practice employee in timely and efficient manner.

DENTAL LAW IS OUR BUSINESS.

Let’s get started. Visit www.obermanlaw.com or call 770-554-1400.
Yes, it’s the beginning of another new year and a new decade. Traditionally, a time for taking stock of ourselves and our lives. Perhaps a time for a renewed consideration of self care? Those born in 1960 will turn 60 this year. Many dentists are now working beyond the traditional retirement age. All the more reason to practice self care in all areas of life. Due to the stresses of dental practice and life in general, all dental professionals can benefit from some form of mindful self-care on a daily basis.

Here are some questions to consider as you begin the new year, giving thought to self-care:

- Are you slowing down, overly tired, or constantly placing work ahead of personal needs, family, or recreation?
- Are you experiencing problems coping with patients or with the normal stress of a busy practice?
- Do you become easily discouraged or annoyed at work or home?
- Have you been concerned that you might be depressed?
- Do you find yourself worrying too much?
- Do you self prescribe or misuse mood-altering drugs, either prescription or OTC?
- Do you drink more than you (or those dear to you) believe is healthy?
- Have you taken a real vacation in the past year? (Dental conferences and CE courses don’t count!)

A career in dentistry can be meaningful and rewarding on many levels, yet it carries potential stressors. The choice of a helping profession can be a contributing factor as those who are health care professionals most always focus on the needs of their patients to the detriment of their own wellbeing. And of course the first priority is patient care; I am suggesting balance. The 2015 ADA Health and Wellness Survey found that dentists continually push themselves physically and mentally beyond healthy limits. This ‘occupational hazard’ begins in dental school and often continues into practice. Inadequate self-care in practice and life can result in physical and mental stress,
The Georgia Dental Recovery Network

A Program of the Georgia Dental Association

The Georgia Dental Recovery Network (DRN) as it functions presently began in November 2000. The DRN is a program provided by the GDA under the Membership Services Committee and was originally known as the GDA CDP, the chemical dependency program.

Today in America, 48 of our 50 states offer some type of support program for dental professionals who experience substance use disorders, as they are now coded and classified in the DSM-V which is the recently revised Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, the handbook of American psychiatry. Substance use disorders are also commonly known as addiction, alcoholism, drug abuse, addictive disease, alcohol/drug problems, and chemical dependence. In Georgia the DRN is a peer assistance dental society-based program under the umbrella of the Georgia Dental Association and is not part of the Georgia Board of Dentistry.

The purpose and mission of the Georgia DRN is to provide services, support, and advocacy to licensed dentists and hygienists in Georgia who, through their use/abuse of chemical substances, may potentially place their patients and themselves in serious jeopardy, even death.

The DRN is committed to providing services to Georgia dentists and hygienists in these areas: 1) identification and intervention where there is a problem with substance use, abuse, or dependence, 2) recommendations for assessment and treatment, and 3) monitoring/advocacy for dental professionals in recovery. The goal of the program is to help and support dental professionals who are suffering at any level from addictive disease, which in turn, will protect the public whom they are licensed and privileged to serve. Additionally, dentists’ or hygienists’ ability to maintain their professional licenses and careers is assisted and fostered by the DRN. All participant names are kept confidential and all information is treated carefully in strictest privacy.

When stress is not met with healthy coping mechanisms a myriad of harmful, if not dangerous outcomes can occur. When alcohol and other drugs are used as the primary coping strategy for stress the door is opened for substance abuse and addiction. Data from the ADA 2015 survey indicated that 10–15% of dentists will develop an alcohol or other drug problem at some point in their lifetime. In 2017, information from U.S. Government agency studies showed that 21 million Americans were alcohol/other drug dependent, making substance use disorder more common than cancer. This is staggering!

Here are some guaranteed methods to “de-stress” yourself and your life. My suggestions are not new, most are tried and true. A revision of your routines and habits can be difficult and unsettling at first. Try change anyway—you just might like it!

- Arrange to get enough rest/sleep
- Engage in moderate exercise on a regular basis
- Make healthier food choices
- Follow a spiritual/religious practice that fits your belief system and calms you
- Communicate our thoughts and feelings openly and often
- Lose the perfectionism as it is a denial of your humanity and a major stress inducer
- Learn to forgive yourself and others
The DRN enjoys a positive working relationship with the Georgia Board of Dentistry. Communication between the DRN and the Board occurs in order to assist dental professionals who are facing Board actions, which may include suspension of license, license probation, and practice restrictions. The communications from our program to the Board are with the dental professional's knowledge and permission. The DRN program does not routinely identify its participants to the licensing board; communication is limited to cases in which the dentist or hygienist is known to the Board due to other circumstances.

Through these communications the DRN provides advocacy for dental professionals by documenting their compliance with program requirements and verifying the status of their recovery.

Jane Walter, LPC, is the Director of the Georgia Dental Association Dental Recovery Network. The network helps licensed dental professionals with addiction and wellbeing issues. Call Jane at 404.376.5987 or email her at jwgda@aol.com for a confidential consultation.

Growing up I had very good eyesight. I was able to read tiny print on a label or clearly see approaching road signs from a distance. Over time without realizing it, I was no longer able to see clearly—until a new pair of glasses brought everything back into focus.

Much like a pair of new glasses, GDA’s strategic plan provides clarity, direction and focus for the Association. Looking back over 2019, we had many significant accomplishments that advanced the strategic plan such as growth in membership, a successful legislative session, expansion of CE courses, the largest annual convention in GDA history, production of a new public relations campaign and record growth of your member-owned GDIS Insurance company.

In 2020, we will continue to sharpen our focus by refreshing our current strategic plan for the next five years. It will build on the achievements that advanced our 2016–2020 strategic plan, as well as identify new initiatives for growth—all through the lens of innovation.

We’ll also continue to sharpen our focus on member engagement and participation. As we begin the new year, I challenge every GDA member to get involved. Go to district meetings, join us for events like LAW Day and the GDA Convention, attend a GDA CE course or simply attend a social event like a new dentist reception. There are plenty of opportunities to get involved and it doesn’t have to take a lot of time. As the old adage goes, “You get back what you put into it.”

Greater participation by members will keep the association strong and also enrich your journey in the profession. Make this the year you see GDA through a new lens and rediscover all that your association has to offer. You’ll be glad you did.
Five-Year Strategic Plan (2016–2020)

Derived from the mission and vision statements, GDA’s strategic plan identifies strategic priorities which directs the work of the association for the next five years. Adjunct Professor Program
The Georgia Dental Association, along with the Dental College of Georgia and the Department of Public Health, established an adjunct professorship program in public health clinics located throughout Georgia, with a focus on rural areas. A GDA member dentist will serve as adjunct faculty for the dental school and provide clinical instruction for dental students who are on rotation. Dr. Wendy Mitchell from the Northwestern District has been selected as the first adjunct professor for the program. The initial test site will be in Albany.

Based on 2019 results, both entities will make additional reserve contributions in 2020. It’s hard to believe that opening day of the 2020 Georgia Legislative Session was Monday, January 13, 2020! While it seems like 2019 certainly flew by, there were numerous political developments at the federal and state levels that impact the 2020 legislative session and elections that will take place later in the year.

2020 Legislative Preview

By Scott Lofranco, GDA General Counsel & VP of Government Affairs

Congressional Developments

One of the hottest topics in Georgia politics last year was who Gov. Brian Kemp would appoint to serve the remainder of Johnny Isakson’s term in the U.S. Senate when Sen. Isakson retired at the end of last year. Political analysts and members of the press had a field day in the latter part of 2019 guessing the identity of his successor, and the implications Gov. Kemp’s chosen appointee would have in the 2020 election cycle. Various news outlets identified several front-runners which included current U.S. Rep. Doug Collins (R-GA 9th District), State House Rep. Jan Jones (R-Milton), and Kelly Loeffler, a Republican businesswoman from Atlanta who is also a part owner of Atlanta’s WNBA franchise. Loeffler was a last-minute addition to the slate of candidates for Sen. Isakson’s seat, and her application sparked controversy within the Georgia Republican Party as a result of President Donald Trump’s repeated calls to Gov. Kemp urging him to appoint Rep. Collins. Immediately after the Thanksgiving holiday, Gov. Kemp formally announced his decision to tap Loeffler as Sen. Isakson’s successor.

Some political strategists view the Governor’s decision as a sign that he views Loeffler as a candidate who can help unite the state party in areas of Georgia where Republican support has waned. Loeffler provides an interesting view into Gov. Kemp’s long-term political strategy, especially considering recent news reports that she did not contribute to President Trump’s campaign in 2016. Moreover, pro-Trump conservatives may have concerns over how her lack of political experience will affect her ability to be an avid supporter of the President and retain the Senate seat in 2020 should impeachment discussions continue to gain momentum throughout upcoming election cycle. Rep. Collins has publicly stated that he may run for the Senate seat in 2020, so it sounds like this saga will continue in 2020.

Other Congressional incumbents including U.S. Sen. David Perdue, will face intense competition and scrutiny from their Democratic challengers. Several Democratic candidates have announced they will be running against Sen. Perdue, including Teresa Tomlinson, the former mayor of Columbus; Ted Terry, the former mayor of Clarkston; Sarah Rigs Amico, who ran for Lt. Governor in 2018; and Jon Ossoff, who lost by a narrow margin to Karen Handel in a 2017 special election for Georgia’s 6th Congressional District.
U.S. Rep. Buddy Carter (R-GA 1st District) has picked up both primary and general election opposition. As a legislator who has been a vocal supporter and sponsor of ADA legislation, he is a key member of Georgia’s Congressional delegation for us. No challengers have announced their candidacy for Georgia’s 3rd Congressional District, which is currently held by U.S. Rep. and GDA member dentist, Drew Ferguson.

State Developments

At the state level, the focal point of Gov. Kemp’s second year in office has been the creation of his Medicaid waiver program, which is intended to provide healthcare coverage to more low-income adults in Georgia. As you may recall from previous reports, a Medicaid waiver is a program submitted by a state asking the federal government to waive certain requirements in that state’s Medicaid plan so that specific populations within the state will be eligible to receive Medicaid benefits.

Gov. Kemp’s waiver proposal is composed of two (2) waivers:

1. Sec. 1332 Waiver: “Georgia Access” is intended to lower insurance premiums, introduce greater choice in the private health insurance market, and strengthen small businesses across Georgia. Under Georgia Access, families with household incomes between 100% to 400% of the federal poverty level will be eligible to receive a state subsidy so that they have the ability to purchase private health insurance plans if they do not like the options being offered through the Affordable Care Act exchanges.

2. Sec. 1115 Waiver: “Georgia Pathways” is intended to make roughly four hundred thousand (408,000) eligible adults will actually be awarded these benefits, Gov. Kemp believes that this proposal provides a balanced, common-sense, and fiscally conservative approach to providing healthcare to low-income Georgians, which includes a work requirement.

To qualify, recipients must have an income of one hundred percent (100%) below the Federal Poverty level and show eighty (80) hours of work activity per month, which can be through a job, volunteer work, vocational training, or full-time post-secondary education. Volunteer work would have to be completed with a registered non-profit organization. However, caring for a sick family member/relative would not count.

Gov. Kemp’s staff presented his waiver package to the Georgia General Assembly in October, and both proposals were submitted to the federal government at the end of 2019 for approval. However, there are concerns as to whether it will be approved because no other state has ever submitted such a proposal.

Georgia Board of Dentistry Updates

New Board Appointments:

- On September 16, 2019, Gov. Brian Kemp announced two new appointments to the Georgia Board of Dentistry (“BOD”):
  - Dr. Glenn Maron is an oral and maxillofacial surgeon with Peachtree Dunwoody Oral and Facial Surgery, PC. Dr. Maron is also a team physician for the Atlanta Braves. He obtained a DDS from Emory University School of Dentistry in 1986. He and his wife, Deborah, live in Dunwoody and they have two children.
  - Mark Scheinfeld was appointed as the consumer member of the board. He is an attorney and lives in Marietta with his wife and children.

Update on the SmileDirectClub Lawsuit against the BOD:

As the GDA has previously reported, the federal court hearing the lawsuit filed by SmileDirectClub (SDC) against the Georgia Board of Dentistry (GA BOD) has ruled that the act of taking intraoral scans constitutes the practice of dentistry, and thus can be regulated by the GA BOD.

However, the court is allowing SDC’s lawsuit to proceed on the issue of whether the Governor’s office was provided sufficient information about the Board’s justification(s) for adopting the intraoral scanning rule, and whether Board members followed the procedural rules (e.g., submitting accurate and complete minutes, adherence to administrative law procedures, etc.) throughout the entire rulemaking process. It is SDC’s contention that the state immunity doctrine does not apply if the administrative rulemaking process was not followed. In October, the Federal Trade Commission (“FTC”) and US Department of Justice filed a joint amicus brief in the case.

Expanded Duties

According to a survey conducted by the ADA Council on Dental Practice, many dentists may not be aware of the functions that expanded-duties dental assistants (EDDA) can perform and the benefits they provide to their practices.

The survey indicated that there was a need to further educate the profession about the capabilities of these assistants that have received more specialized training, said Dr. Craig Ratner, chair of the Council on Dental Practice.

“Expanded-duties dental assistants bring real value to the dental team and improve efficiency throughout the practice,” said Dr. Ratner. “Our survey revealed a dentist can utilize his or her time and skills more efficiently when the EDDA performs, under supervision, additional tasks allowing the practice to schedule more patients each day.”

It is important to realize, Dr. Ratner cautioned, that while EDDAs can perform many more tasks in their expanded role, employer dentists alone are accountable for supervision.

Other key findings from the survey revealed that:

- 59.9% of respondents reported employing EDDAs, but less than half were using those EDDAs to the fullest extent permitted.

Having an EDDA on staff helped dentists:

- Use time more efficiently—92.1% of respondents
- See more patients daily—67.5%
- Lower overall operating expenses—34.1%

Common functions that should only be performed by Expanded Duties Dental Assistants

- Make impressions to be used to repair a damaged prosthesis, fabricate a night guard or for passive orthodontic appliances.
- Redress (not initial placement of dressing) and remove dressing from alveolar sockets in post-operative osteitis.
- Monitor the administration of nitrous oxide/oxygen.
- Apply topical anticariogenic agents.
- Apply pit and fissure sealants, and primer and bonding agents to etched enamel or dentin.
- Pack and remove retraction cord, as prescribed by the dentist.
- Change bleaching agent, following initial applications by the dentist, during the bleaching process of vital and non-vital teeth after the placement of a rubber dam; and applying the fiber-optic light source of a curing light for activation of the bleach.
- Re-bond brackets after a licensed dentist has examined the affected tooth and surrounding gingiva and found no evidence of pathology.
- Digital scans for fabrication orthodontic appliances and models.

If your dental assistants are performing any of these functions and are not certified for these expanded duties you are putting your practice at significant risk. Enroll your assistants in an expanded duties course ASAP.

For the complete list of expanded duties functions, visit the Georgia Board of Dentistry and look for Board Rule 150-9-.02.

Discussing the Differences in Liability Coverage

Travelers offers more product options than many other carriers to meet your needs.

Travelers is a premier business partner of Georgia Dental Insurance Services (GDIS). They stand out from many other insurance carriers by offering both a traditional split limit policy and a combined single limit policy in most states.

What’s the difference?
The difference between a split limit policy and a combined single limit policy is simply this: a split limit policy splits the coverage amounts, apportioning how much protection you have for bodily injury liability (both per person and per accident) and for property damage liability; a combined single limit policy gives you one single amount of coverage to use based on your total liability for bodily injury and property damage resulting from an accident, affording more flexibility.

I’m not sure I understand. Can you give me an example?
OK. Let’s say you have a traditional split limit policy and your coverage limits read 100/300/50.

What do those numbers mean?
This is a very common question and you are not the first to ask. The numbers 100 and 300 are dollar amounts:

$100,000 and $300,000 are coverage limits for liability for bodily injury. The $100,000 is the maximum amount the policy pays for your liability for each injured person and the $300,000 is the maximum amount the policy pays your liability for each accident. The last number 50 means that you have $50,000 in coverage for liability for property damage.

Now let’s take a look at a live example:
Let’s say you have the 100/300/50 split limit policy just referenced. You cause a serious accident...

You accidentally cause a trailer truck to run off the road, wrecking the truck and its cargo, combined value of $100,000. The trucker is hurt and needs $150,000 worth of medical care. The trucker is carrying a passenger who needs $29,000 in medical care. The accident is covered under the terms of the policy.

The total cost to settle the property damage and bodily injury caused by the accident is $279,000. Let’s work through... how much coverage you had for each of the three claims.

You have a maximum bodily injury per accident insurance limit of $300,000. You also have property damage and per person sub-limits.

Here is how this scenario plays out ...

The wrecked truck and its cargo, combined value of $100,000, are considered property. Since you have a property damage sub-limit of $50,000, your insurance pays only half. You are responsible for $50,000.

The trucker’s $150,000 of bodily injury won’t be paid entirely, either. Recall the $100,000 “each person” limit? ... which will require you to pay another $50,000.

The passenger’s injuries of $29,000 are paid in full as they fit under the $100,000 per person sub-limit.

Under this scenario, your insurance company is only required to pay $179,000. You are responsible for the remaining $100,000.

How does that compare to a combined single limit policy?

If you had a combined single limit policy of $300,000, it would pay the entire cost of this accident—$279,000. That’s because the total liability limit, not just the sub-limits, is available to satisfy claims.

Does a combined single limit policy cost more?

It costs slightly more—about 8% more than a split limit policy offering comparable coverage but as the disastrous scenario illustrates, it is important to consider not just price but coverage. For the average policy costing $1000, for $80 more, a combined single limit policy may give you more coverage, $100,000 more coverage in this case because there are no sub-limits. That is added peace of mind that you will be protected in case of a serious accident.

It is important to note, though, that there are times where a split limit policy may provide more coverage.

For example, in the scenario given, if there had been three injured persons, each with $100,000 worth of bodily injuries, and $50,000 of property damage, the policy would have provided $350,000 for the accident.

Have your needs changed since you last looked over your auto and homeowners insurance policies?

The insurance policies that protected you many years ago may not offer the protection that you need today. Your GDIS team has over 50 years combined experience. Let us evaluate your insurance needs to be sure you are well protected. Call us today for a free and confidential risk evaluation.

Things have been busy in the American Dental Association Science Institute. The ADA division based in Chicago houses such hallmarks of dentistry as the ADA Seal of Acceptance, the nationally recognized symbol of safe and effective dental products and services, and the ADA Science Laboratory, where cutting-edge research is conducted and presented worldwide.

The ADA Science Institute also comprises such departments as the association’s Center for Evidence-Based Dentistry (EBD), ADA Clinical Evaluators (ACE) Panel, and Scientific Information team. Here we highlight some of these teams’ work as well as ADA members who have been impacted.

NEW GUIDELINE RECOMMENDS AGAINST ANTIBIOTICS FOR MOST TOOTHACHES

Antibiotics should not be prescribed for most dental pain and swelling, according to a new guideline published by the ADA Center for EBD. Instead, dental treatment and, if necessary, over-the-counter pain relievers such as acetaminophen and ibuprofen should be prioritized instead.

The guideline recommends “antibiotics should only be used when absolutely necessary,” says Peter Lockhart, D.D.S., chair of the ADA panel that developed the guideline and research professor at Carolinas Medical Center—Atrium Health. “If you have a toothache, in most cases, it can be treated with a visit to a dentist and without an antibiotic.”

The guideline’s recommendations concern adult patients who are not severely immunocompromised and experience symptomatic irreversible pulpitis, symptomatic apical periodontitis, or localized acute apical abscess. To address these conditions, the guideline’s recommendations cover two possible scenarios: either a patient has access to immediate dental treatment such as a pulpotomy, pulpectomy, nonsurgical root canal treatment, or incision and drainage or a patient does not have immediate access to these treatments. In both instances, dental treatment and, if necessary, over-the-counter pain relievers should be used to relieve symptoms. Antibiotics should only be prescribed if a patient’s symptoms progress to systemic involvement.

“Antibiotics should not be used until an infection progresses enough that it can no longer be treated with only dental treatment like a no surgical root canal,” Dr. Lockhart says. “Signs and symptoms of this progression include fever, swollen lymph nodes, facial swelling, and extreme tiredness.”

The recommendations come from a panel of experts and Center for EBD methodologists who conducted a systematic review of the scientific literature to arrive at conclusions based on the best available evidence. “This review allowed us to clearly define the benefits and harms of antibiotic use while assessing the quality of the data supporting our recommendations,” Dr. Lockhart says. The review led to the recommendations that were published in the “Evidence-Based Clinical Practice Guideline on Antibiotic Use for the Urgent Management of Pulpal- and Periapical-Related Dental Pain and Intraoral Swelling,” which appeared in the November issue of the Journal of the American Dental Association.

To encourage antibiotic stewardship, the guideline highlights two practices that are somewhat nascent to dentistry. The first such practice is called delayed prescribing, in which a dentist writes an antibiotics prescription for a patient but instructs that patient to fill the prescription only if their symptoms become systemic prior to the performance of dental treatment. The second practice is encouraging patients to discontinue the use of antibiotics after their symptoms have resolved for 24 hours, regardless of whether or not that patient still has antibiotics left in their prescription. The hope is that these measures will minimize the inappropriate use of antibiotics, thereby minimizing the promotion of antibiotic resistance.

To help clinicians apply the guideline’s recommendations, a suite of resources... have been created, including the following:

- Chairside guides that clinicians can use during patient care to identify appropriate antibiotic regimens.
- An online tool that identifies the guideline recommendation most relevant for a particular clinical scenario.
- English- and Spanish-language videos that explain to patients why an antibiotic prescription might offer more harms than benefits.

Given the guideline’s applicability to clinicians outside of dentistry, such as emergency room and primary care physicians who encounter patients with dental pain and swelling, the guideline panel plans to translate its guideline into language that is applicable to the larger medical community. The hope is to publish this revision in a medical journal at some point in 2020.

“I hope this guideline will change the way both health care professionals and patients view antibiotics,” Dr. Lockhart says. “I expect that, over time, there will be a reduction in antibiotic use in situations where they are not needed.”

ACE PANEL PROVIDES OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN FROM, HELP DENTISTS

Richard Riddle, D.M.D., has a question for any dentists who are on the fence about joining the ADA Clinical Evaluators (ACE) Panel: “What are you waiting for?”

A member of the ACE Panel since its launch in 2016, Dr. Riddle is one of hundreds of dentists who every three months answer a survey about their experiences with a particular dental topic such as bonding agents, fluoride varnish, or the reprocessing of rotary cutting instruments. The surveys are brief (“It takes all of five minutes” to complete, Dr. Riddle says), and the results are then compiled into a report that is made available to all dentists.

Dr. Riddle loves being able to look at the results of the reports to see how his experiences compare with those of his colleagues. “I always want to learn from my peers,” he says. Dr. Riddle finds it reassuring when there is alignment, and he finds it instructive when disagreement exists. “It’s like, ‘Oh, this is what other dentists are doing. Maybe I should look at some literature so I can improve my technique.’”

Another reason Dr. Riddle appreciates inconsistencies that may appear in the ACE Panel reports is that they can highlight the need for future research that encourages greater uniformity among dental practices. “You get the satisfaction of knowing that you’re putting together data that help people know if they want to do research in something,” he says.

One more added benefit, Dr. Riddle says, is that participating in the reports provides him with an opportunity to educate others about his professional habits. Dr. Riddle values this opportunity to share his knowledge because he has more than 30 years of clinical experience from which to draw on when completing an ACE Panel survey. He suspects that other dentists would be similarly attracted to participate in the ACE Panel. “Dentists want to teach or be involved in some kind of a higher pursuit that helps everybody else,” Dr. Riddle explains, and the panel’s reports facilitate such education.

When it comes right down to it, Dr. Riddle sees no reason why every dentist wouldn’t want to be on the ACE Panel. “There are so many pulls on our personal time, our dedication, and our energies, but this is one that is a no-brainer,” he says. “I do not understand why more people don’t do it.”

To join the ACE Panel and view past reports, visit ADA.org/ACE.

ADA SCIENTIFIC INFORMATION PROVIDES RESEARCH ASSISTANCE

Although her presentation topics may vary, Barbara Steinberg, D.D.S., says that whenever she is preparing for a talk in front of others, she always makes sure to consult the ADA. Oftentimes, she will reference online resources such as the Oral Health Topics webpages, which provide up-to-date scientific reviews on a variety of dental subjects and are maintained by ADA Scientific Information. She will also call the ADA Member Service Center, where she can be connected with the ADA’s concierge service. This service allows ADA members to speak with a representative from Scientific Information who can forward relevant research.

“I always want to make sure that, even though I keep up with all the literature, that I’m on the same page as what the ADA promotes,” says the clinical professor of surgery at Drexel University College of Medicine and adjunct associate professor of oral medicine at the University of Pennsylvania School of Dental Medicine.

In the coming months, for instance, Dr. Steinberg will be presenting at a meeting on pain management in pregnancy. To prepare, she plans to peruse the Oral Health Topics pages, where information concerning both pregnancy and oral analgesics for acute dental pain exist. She will also call the ADA Member Service Center, which can connect her with the ADA Scientific Information team and their research resources.

Douglas Halkyard, D.D.S., can similarly attest to the benefits of working with the ADAs concierge service. In addition to connecting members with the ADA’s Scientific Information team, the service can connect members with ADA Center for Dental Practice for advice on how to run a dental office, ADA Third Party Payer for advice on handling dental benefits and coding, and ADA Library & Archives for deep dives into research. Dr. Halkyard has used the concierge service several times. Once when he had a question about periodontal treatment, the Morris, IL-based dentist spoke with ADA Library & Archives in the morning, and by the afternoon, several articles had been forwarded to him.

“It was just an easy process to go through,” Dr. Halkyard says of the concierge service. If you have a question about the science behind “a procedure or a technique or scientific articles that you’d like to look up, I think it’s a valuable service that the ADA offers. I would recommend it.

“It’s especially helpful if you’re a busy practice and you don’t have time to go searching on your own,” he adds. “It’s nice to have someone with access to all these articles that they can look up on the computer. It just makes it so much simpler to find something rather than searching for articles on your own.”
What is your most memorable GDA experience?
My most memorable GDA experience was going to LAW day while in dental school and it was an amazing experience. It was awesome to see so many colleagues and future colleagues care about laws that would affect us if passed. It made me really understand how important it is to be part of a professional group like the GDA.

What advice would you give to an aspiring dental student?
Learn as much as you can while in dental school and do a residency after school.

What did you want to be when you were growing up?
I wanted to be a dentist or NBA player (I used to pray every night to be 6’3”). Let’s just say that didn’t happen. Haha.

What was your first job?
My first job at 16 years-old was a dental assistant.

Why did you decide to become a dentist?
I’ve always wanted to help people. I really enjoyed seeing my dentist. I loved the way the office was always so warm and welcoming when I arrived.

What do you enjoy doing in your spare time?
I workout, play basketball, run, and work on my grilling skills. I’ve been watching a lot of videos on how to properly smoke chicken and other meats.

What is your all-time dream vacation?
Cape Town, South Africa. I went in undergrad as part of a research trip and I’ve always wanted to go back.

Without saying, “I am a dentist,” what would you say if someone asked what you do?
“Smile Maker!”
