In August, nearly 300 members of the Georgia Dental Association, along with volunteers, contributed to our fourth Georgia Mission of Mercy. Over $1.5 million of services were donated to nearly 2,000 patients during the event in Augusta. It took two years of planning and raising funds equivalent to nearly $300K to support a 48-hour marathon that ended with a lot of tired bodies and immense satisfaction.

As one of the tired bodies, I couldn’t resist asking myself why so many of us came out with such great enthusiasm to donate their time and service? Organizers and staff at the GDA office spent two years of their lives raising every penny and stressing over every little detail while trying to cope with the day-to-day responsibilities of a practice, patients, official duties, and family commitments. I could look in books and publications to find more refined and articulate academic reasons for their service. However, the best answer always comes from on-the-ground human interactions.

I found that it was their personal ethics and commitment to healthcare that was a true driving force. Many of these volunteers are my friends and their acquaintance is a true blessing. Fundamentally they all share one common moral responsibility, that is to improve oral health of our citizens. At GDA, we engage with our members, legislators, third party payers, and other key players to create a system that provides access or limits barriers to care. This constant unending engagement requires vigilance, strategy, man power, and funding. Many of the same individuals and members contribute to this goal. My assessment of their true motive comes from interactions beyond that 48-hour event. They truly care about this fundamental mission. GMOM may have been two days long, but our mission continues on a daily basis, and the drive to sustain it comes from adherence to a code of better oral health for all our citizens.

For all the criticism about our profession, what is clear is the ethical standards our students and our practitioners. Their caring values remain the back bone of success of our profession. Dentists are givers. Many contribute to missions abroad, participate at clinics like Ben Mansell and Good Samaritan, and almost all of us extend flexibility to our patients to make treatment more accessible. Directly or indirectly, the ADA code of professional conduct and the rules of the Board of Dentistry filter through this fundamental goal of better oral health for our patients.

I am proud to say as a profession we did “many things right.” Who do we give credit to? I guess we all can share that credit: Dentists who inspire young students to pursue dentistry as a career, educators who select the right students and give them good training and direction, peers in the private practice who directly or indirectly through organized dentistry encourage the right values and professional standards. Our mission statement at GDA states, “Help every dentist succeed.” This is a bold statement. It will take a constant commitment to the right values. We must help every dentist to succeed so that the right values are encouraged to uphold the moral promise to patients, society, and the profession.

In the words of my favorite artist, Freddie Mercury, who died the same year I arrived in England, “The Show Must Go On.”
GDA Among Top Lobbying Associations in Georgia

James Magazine’s annual Lobbyists Issue in September named GDA number 20 in its Top 30 Business & Trade Associations rankings. In addition, Emily Yona, GDA’s Director of Health Policy, was listed as a rising star in the state. This is the first time in GDA history the association has been ranked in James Magazine, a public policy magazine that reaches more than 20,000 influential leaders.

Leadership GDA Workshop

In August, Leadership GDA members met at the GDA office for a leadership workshop. Carol Paige spoke to members about the essentials of dental practice management and leadership. Members also learned about financial literacy and held a discussion on the book, Lincoln on Leadership.

GDA Numbered 20 in its Top 30 Business and Trade Associations rankings.

Applications for the 2019 GDA Leadership Program are due February 1, 2019. Leadership GDA helps members grow into more knowledgeable and confident leaders within the dental community. Participants also gain a better understanding of GDA and how to become involved in leadership in organized dentistry. If members of your district are interested in leadership positions in GDA or your district, please encourage them to apply for the program.

Volunteers Needed

Donated Dental Services (DDS) Program
You can change a life. From clearing up painful dental infections and being able to eat again to rejoining the workforce—volunteering with the Georgia Donated Dental Services (DDS) will make a life-changing difference for the people we serve. Volunteer dentists treat patients in their offices, utilizing their own equipment and staff. Several manufacturers donate materials and labs also participate in the program. Volunteers provide comprehensive treatment for 1–2 patients per year.

Please consider volunteering today: https://dentallifeline.org/our-volunteers/volunteer-now/.

Adjunct Faculty Program
The adjunct faculty program connects GDA Dentists with Dental College of Georgia students through volunteer clinic hours in the clinic at DCG or any approved charitable clinic in Georgia. The goal of this program is to not only help bridge the gap between GDA member dentists and dental students, but also to provide dental students with quality, evidence-based instruction and ethical guidelines and concepts of professionalism that will serve as the foundation for their careers. Volunteer dentists must commit to teaching/volunteering at least one day per month over a minimum of a one-year period and complete the DCG adjunct faculty appointment process.

For more information and a list of approved clinics near you, contact Katherine Torbush at katherine@gadental.org.

DCG Lunch & Learns
The GDA is seeking dentists to speak during lunch and learn events at the Dental College of Georgia in 2019.

If you are interested in speaking at a lunch and learn, please email Katherine Torbush at katherine@gadental.org or fill out the student engagement survey online.

Tips to Manage your Dental Team Effectively

By Sharon Williams

The secret of running a successful dental practice is having a great team. Every person on the team, from the receptionist to the dentist, holds a critical role. Team members rely on each other to perform their tasks and when managed efficiently, everyone is working towards a common goal resulting in immense success.

Here are five tips to help manage your dental team effectively.

Communicate Clearly
Excellent communication skills are essential in every relationship—both personal and professional. Its importance can be applied in the dental practice as well. If your staff is unwilling to talk honestly or listen patiently to each other, it can be tricky to foster healthy relationships. It isn't unusual for employees to stay quiet or bury issues that bother them for fear of getting reprimanded or to avoid conflict. However, not addressing the issue will just make things worse in the long run. If there is open conversation, you can find the root cause of the problem, address it and reach a positive solution.
Show Appreciation
Whenever there is a problem or crisis in your practice, there may be finger-pointing as an instinct of self-preservation. In order to prevent this, you must sit together and solve problems as a team, regardless of who is at fault. Moreover, it is equally important to appreciate and praise your staff when they perform well. Replacing criticism with appreciation will surely lift the morale of the employees and you can see a positive change in the workplace.

Admit Your Mistakes
As a team leader, it is critical that you admit your own mistakes. This valuable trait sets an example to your employees that mistakes happen and there is nothing wrong with admitting it. Doing this will not only improve the team morale but also provide learning opportunities that will help your team grow professionally.

Offer and Ask for Help
Another trait that you must encourage amongst your team is to ask and offer help to their teammates when needed. If someone is swamped with more work than they can handle, encourage others to step in and help them out. Let people know that it is perfectly alright to ask for help and not be shy about it. Instill the idea that asking for help just means that they need some assistance and that it doesn’t suggest that they are incompetent.

Foster Leadership in Team Members
As a leader you must have a clear vision of how to guide your team and delegate work. At the same time, it is essential that you foster leadership in the team members as well. Hold them accountable and encourage them to use resources that will equip them in becoming a strong leader. Proper team management will provide a great working environment for the employees and also help in getting new patients for your practice.

Stressed, Anyone?

By Jane Walter, LPC

Stress certainly seems to be a fact of contemporary American lifestyles. Studies over the past twenty years suggest that the promise of more relaxed lives due to technology has turned into a bad dream for many people who are unable to resist the lure of one more electronic device that will make specific tasks easier or faster. Despite our high tech world, we seem to be more stressed than ever. But what is stress, exactly? Webster’s defines stress as mental or physical tension. My work as a therapist and counselor has taught me that stress is an individualized issue—something that stresses me may not bother you at all and conversely so. This makes sense, given that we are each shaped by the sum total of our specific individual experiences to the present point in our lifespan. Another, more descriptive definition of stress details it as a product of the complex interaction between one’s experience of external events and the level of one’s internal confidence to address, manage, or resolve those events. Notice there is no mention of controlling the stressful events. Without question, a strong need to control situations or others contributes to stress rather than eliminates it.

Choice of Profession

As health care providers, dentists, hygienists, and dental assistants encounter stresses unique to their professions. The choice of a helping profession itself may even be a contributing factor, as people who work as helpers for a living almost always focus on their patients’ needs to the detriment of their own wellbeing. Often they have chosen a health care profession in an unconscious attempt to heal themselves from earlier emotional injury through their efforts at helping others. Additionally, the more technical the professional training, the less the attention given to the emotional and relational needs of the practitioners, resulting in a lot of people who excel at taking care of others but are not so good at taking care of themselves. Dental practice can be quite stressful due to the number and variety of skills and talents required to be successful. I don’t know of another profession that calls for the following abilities: the eye of an artist, the hands of a surgeon, the insight of a therapist, the tact of a diplomat, the knowledge of a scientist, and the business acumen of a CEO. Developing and maintaining excellence, or even adequacy, in all of these areas can be stressful, even for the most balanced person.

In the Office

There is potential for stress due to natural factors that are present in some dental offices. Many dentists refer to their staff as a second family or an “office” family and unfortunately, relate to them in that manner, often resulting in major problems for the doctor and the staff. Boundaries can become blurred and often the dentist finds him or herself with management problems as dysfunctional, codependent relationships form in the office. Staff members may adopt unhealthy roles due to unclear expectations related to job duties, or as a corollary to the dentist’s insecurity with leadership and discomfort with personnel management. When the doctor has trouble enforcing office policies it may be based in his/her discomfort with being a “boss” versus being a “buddy.” Of course another contributing factor to problematic and stressful office relationships can be just good old-fashioned personality conflicts. Dental office staff report that many dentists with whom they have worked have tendencies toward perfectionism and micro-management to the point that it “drives everyone crazy.” Dentists have noted that staff members who are manipulative or passive-aggressive certainly can contribute to stress in the office. If the dentist’s spouse is also a staff member, the potential exists for all kinds of additional stress producing problems—again, due to lack of clarity of roles and the likelihood for interpersonal conflicts among the staff and the dentist and the spouse. When the dentist is not comfortable with managing staff, stress is inevitable for everyone in the office, sometimes extending to patients.

Stress in the office can also result from some of the realities of dental practice. The dentist and hygienist are working in an emotionally charged part of the human body, the mouth, which is a very sensitive and intimate area for most people. Many dental patients are frightened and some are quite verbal about their anxieties, sometimes to the point of hostility toward the dentist and staff. Stress can develop if the dentist absorbs the patient’s emotional distress and if he/she has a high need for approval, the stress is exacerbated. Dealing with the demands of other types of difficult patients can also be a challenge to the dentist’s stress management skills: the ever complaining patient, the never satisfied patient, the patient who demands perfection, the patient who expects restorations to last forever, the patient who doesn’t want to pay for professional services, the patient who is always late or reschedules constantly, the drug-seeking patient, the patient who brings unruly children along to the appointment. (I am confident this is only a partial list. Please email me with examples of your experiences.) And, of course, one of the major stresses of dental practice is the challenge of coping with the reality that you are trained in a profession with the goal of treating problems and improving dental health—an essential endeavor, but that at times, your work will cause pain to the patient.

Many people are unable to recognize stress as it is occurring, which can then result in stress building to the point of causing a number of serious problems with the potential for burnout. Stress which is transformed into physical tension and pain is common among dental professionals. The physical requirements of dentistry often cause eyestrain and neck, back, leg, shoulder, arm, or hand pain. In a survey a few years ago of 31 dentists who are participants in the GDA Dental Recovery Network, 11 identified work-related physical pain as an antecedent to their initial use of drugs—that is, drugs that were not prescribed for them by a physician. This is drug abuse when the drug is illegal or self-prescribed and is something other than over-the-counter analgesics. Additionally, 21 of the 31 dentists identified dental career factors as contributing to the development of their chemical dependency. Other than physical...

- Remember to breathe deeply several times throughout your day pain, the factors surveyed were: stress, isolation, availability of drugs, feeling undervalued, dealing with patients beyond dental procedures, and managing staff. 18 of the 21 named work-related stress as contributing to their addictive disease. Clearly there are many factors that cause or contribute to the development of any disease, but we cannot ignore the impact of stress on our physical and mental wellbeing. Learning to identify and resolve stress in our lives and ourselves is critical for sustaining overall good health.

What to Do?
Given that stress is an inevitable fact of life for most of us, the challenge of stress management is ever present. As noted at the outset, there are countless websites, magazine articles, and books written in response to the problem. Just as stress itself is an individualized experience, so does the preferred method of stress management vary from person to person. The following choices are my offering; none are original or new, but are worth repeating. Many of us are reluctant to make the changes that are proven to decrease stress. The key word is change. As human beings we often resist change because it involves a shift in habit or routine. We are creatures of habit and are sometimes more comfortable staying stuck in that which with is familiar. Change can be accompanied by anxiety. And of course, there is the fear of giving up something which provides the perception of comfort. If you are willing to make some of the changes listed on page 16 you will experience a decrease in the stress in your life. And then comes an enhanced sense of wellbeing.

When your stress causes a significant or chronic problem in your mental health or physical condition, it is time to seek professional guidance despite some discomfort with asking for help.

Jane Walter, LPC, is the Director of the Georgia Dental Association Dental Recovery Network. The network helps licensed dental professionals with addiction and wellbeing issues. Call Jane at 404-376-5987 or email her at jwgda@aol.com for a confidential consultation.

Do Your Patients Suffer From Any of These Symptoms?

If your patients have any of these symptoms and are not responding to treatments, they may be suffering from a TMJ disorder. Problems within the jaw can produce a myriad of symptoms that, at first glance, might appear to be totally unrelated to the temporomandibular complex. Our dedicated team of professionals have years of training and are happy to assist you in the diagnosis and treatment of possible craniofacial/temporomandibular disorders.

The Georgia Dental Recovery Network
The Georgia Dental Recovery Network (DRN) as it functions presently began in November 2000. The DRN is a program provided by the GDA and was originally known as the GDA CDP, the chemical dependency program.

Today in America, 47 of our 50 states offer some type of support program for dental professionals who experience substance use disorders, as they are now coded and classified in the DSM-V which is the recently revised Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, the handbook of American psychiatry. Substance use disorders are also commonly known as addiction, alcoholism, drug abuse, addictive disease, alcohol/drug problems, and chemical dependence. In Georgia, the DRN is a peer assistance dental society-based program under the umbrella of the Georgia Dental Association and is not part of the Georgia Board of Dentistry.

The purpose and mission of the Georgia DRN is to provide services, support, and advocacy to licensed dentists and hygienists in Georgia who, through their use/abuse of chemical substances, may potentially place their patients and themselves in serious jeopardy, even death.

There is help. That simple message and a phone call to the GDA Dental Recovery Network put John on a path to sobriety, something he could not have imagined just a few years ago. “If you would have told me the day before I went into treatment that my life would be this good, I would have told you that you were a liar,” says John, a general dentist in Georgia.

A practice owner, John would not drink while at work. However, he began to worry that he might have a problem when he couldn’t wait for a drink at the end of the day to deal with stress and anxiety. Abusing alcohol eventually took a heavy toll on his life. He lost his house and practice, got divorced, and became estranged from his kids.

Realizing he had a problem, he sought help through the GDA Dental Recovery Network, a program available to licensed dentists and hygienists in Georgia to help address addiction and stress-related issues. The program is anonymous, and there is no charge to participate.

He says the program gave him hope and a network of friends.

“When I showed up at my first meeting, I realized that other people have this problem, too. It’s a disease that can get anyone. The same problems will always be there, but the program helps you deal with everyday life.”

John credits the program with helping him get his life back on track.

“One of the worries people often have in seeking out care is that they feel it is the end,” he says. “By making the initial phone call and taking action, I went from being a lost soul to everything is going to be OK.”

Today, John has a thriving practice, is rebuilding relationships and says his life is better than he could have ever imagined. “I caught a second wind in life,” he says. “If you are worried that you have a problem, there is absolutely help whether it is through the GDA Dental Recovery Network or another program,” says John. “If you seek that help and take advantage of it, your life will get better.”

For help with a wellbeing or chemical dependency program, call the GDA Dental Recovery Network confidential phone line at 404-376-5987 or email the Network at jwgda@aol.com. Your anonymity will be protected.
The goal of the program is to help and support dental professionals who are suffering at any level from addictive disease, which in turn, will protect the public whom they are licensed and privileged to serve.

The goal of the program is to help and support dental professionals who are suffering at any level from addictive disease, which in turn, will protect the public whom they are licensed and privileged to serve. Additionally, dentists' or hygienists' ability to maintain their professional licenses and careers is assisted and fostered by the DRN. All participant names are kept confidential and all information is treated carefully in strictest privacy.

DRN and the Board
The DRN enjoys a positive working relationship with the Georgia Board of Dentistry. As DRN Director, I have worked over the years to increase communication between the DRN and the Board in order to assist dental professionals who are facing Board actions, which may include suspension of license, license probation, and practice restrictions. The communications from our program to the Board are with the dental professional's knowledge and permission. The DRN program does not routinely identify its participants to the licensing board; communications are limited to cases in which the dentist or hygienist is known to the Board by other circumstances. Through these communications the DRN provides advocacy for dental professionals by verifying their compliance with program requirements and generally vouching for the status of their recovery.

OPEN ENROLLMENT
GDA’s 2019 Group Health Plan is Here!

Why Members Like You Are Making the Switch

Christy Biddy, your Medical Benefits Manager, talks with members around the state about their insurance needs every day. The situations below faced by your dental colleagues are a few examples of why dentists are enrolling in GDA’s Group Health Plan:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>MEMBER EXPERIENCES WITH OTHER PLANS</th>
<th>GDA GROUP HEALTH PLAN</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Premium increases. Some members experienced mid-year premium increases. Although unfortunate, an occurrence does not qualify you to leave a plan.</td>
<td>Premiums are guaranteed for a year.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Loss of plan. One member and his wife shared that in 2015, they left GDA’s group coverage for a new plan. A year later, it was cancelled. They found a new provider, and again—one year later, their plan was canceled.</td>
<td>No loss of plan with group coverage.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mid-year cancellations. This fall, another member learned her plan was cancelled on her birthday, before its annual renewal.</td>
<td>No mid-year cancellations.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>No health history coverage limitations. Still another GDA member was denied coverage for a surgery in 2015 due to health history disclosures—something our plans don’t require.</td>
<td>No health history coverage limitations.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Impersonal lack of communication. One member’s family wasn’t even informed about a plan cancellation—they found out as they were at a doctor’s appointment for their child.</td>
<td>Personal, attentive service.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Age banding. On individual plans, premiums are based on your age. The older you are, the higher your premium.</td>
<td>No age banding.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Narrow Networks. On other plans members may experience a less comprehensive network of health care providers.</td>
<td>Broad networks with more provider choice.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

LETTER TO THE EDITOR
With grace, beauty, and masterful skill, the Georgia Dental Association and its Foundation for Oral Health performed for the fourth time in a six-ring production of its Mission of Mercy.

The venue was perfect. The volunteers, including dental personnel, came through with enthusiasm and desire to provide the treatment promised. Dental supplies, equipment, and hospitality were graciously provided and perfectly timed. The clinic was set up and broken down in record time. Patients arrived in a steady flow that was comfortable for the patient and also for the process of getting them to the clinic, making waiting time as short as possible.

The ringmaster was Dr. Jonathan Bullard, an Augusta dentist, who spent the last year and a half putting together a collection of over 70 leaders who helped him along with his co-local arrangement chair, Dr. Annette Rainge, to make it happen. He had a year of learning and perfecting. He deserves a thank you from each of us.

There are so many people to thank that it would be impossible to not miss someone. But, a few went above and beyond and need to be mentioned. Dr. Brad Hall had amazing contact with dental and other suppliers obtained all the in-kind donations that makes the monetary outlay much, much less. Dealing with past GMOM supplies and storing for a future one were also his tasks.

Speaking of money, Dr. Paul Trotter, used his great enthusiasm and impressive contacts in the Augusta area to surpass the goal of dollars raised. He never doubted that we could be solvent and leave some extra for Foundation besides.

Broken Shackle Ranch, and the young men that are served by them, were woven through the entire event. They were there for setup and breakdown and they fed all the volunteers breakfast and lunch for the two days. Look them up on the web, be impressed, and send them a donation in gratitude.

Well deserved thanks also goes to the GDA office. Frank Capaldo and the other staff members worked extremely hard, putting in many hours, supporting us and answering our every request.

They submitted grants that were a big part of our fundraising and provided support to promote the event to the patients and volunteers. Special thanks to Kathrine Torbush, who went from understudy to star performer when she was called on. She was such a delight, and her smile was motivation to keep an upbeat attitude.

Last, but definitely not least, is a big thanks for the support of the members. This year we got monetary support from many of our members, Some stepped up with donations when they saw an area that had a cost that was not in the initial budget (Larell Dentures). Others donated when they saw that GMOMs don’t happen without their help. Even more impressive is the number of members from around the state and their staff that marked off their schedule and sacrificed a Saturday to help the people we sought to serve. The outpouring of generous support and love was palpable. You feel it somewhere in the middle of your chest then radiates up to your head.

The Cirque du Dentiste camaraderie and desire to all pull in the same direction was better than any high wire act or lion tamer that could have performed. The hard concrete floors and long hours made for many aches and pains, but the hugs and smiles in the end made it all worthwhile.

– Michael O. Vernon, DMD

The efforts and commitment by your organizing team deserve our deep felt gratitude. Your dedication is commendable beyond words. It is a testament to the moral promise our profession upholds to patients, society, and profession. We are proud and grateful.

“Those of us who were volunteers at GMOM this month in Augusta were recipients of an indescribable ministry by way of the polite, hardworking gentlemen of Broken Shackle Ranch. Working alongside Program Director David Cobb, these young men were the hub of a giant wheel of volunteers making GMOM possible. What some may not realize is without these men we could not/would not have completed set up on Thursday in a timely manner. Additionally, they were cooking breakfast and lunch for us each day by 2:00 am, while we were still resting our weary bones. Their work ethic was amazing and their food was awesome.”

“The testimonies of patients and comradery of volunteers made the experience one to remember! Thank you GMOM for all that you continue to do!”

“One of my favorite stories of GMOM was Lawrence here in this photo. He had some extractions first thing Saturday morning and stayed the whole day as a volunteer to show his gratitude for what he received. I checked on him periodically to make sure he was okay, and he would say, I’m good, I’m good, I can keep helping.”

We are pleased to announce...

Dr. Clinton Baugham has acquired the Peachtree Corners practice of Dr. J. Bion Moreland. Doug Farley of US Dental Transitions team is pleased to have assisted in this transition.

I would like to thank Doug Farley for finding the right person to succeed me in my practice and helping us minimize the stress during the transitions. -Dr. Bion Moreland

Doug, thank you for making a life-changing event for me as easy as possible. -Dr. Clinton Baugham
This column highlights GDA members talking about their path to dentistry and the value they find in GDA membership. This month, we hear from Eric Anderson in the Northern District.
How did you become a GDA member?
My freshman year of dental school I decided to run for the Legislative Liaison position within the American Student Dental Association (ASDA). Having followed politics on a national and international level for much of my high school and collegiate careers, I was drawn to the opportunity to become involved with the policymaking process of my future profession. Through the experiences afforded to me through ASDA, I learned how vital organized dentistry is to the profession.

Who introduced you to GDA?
I met Dr. Doug Torbush during his presidential year with the GDA, which was my vice presidential year with ASDA. We clicked instantly and were able to collaborate on several projects specific to the GDA. His enthusiasm and sincerity was inspiring, and I still carry his GDA President business card in my wallet.

What was your first GDA meeting/event?
Through the GDA-ASDA partnership, the GDA Lobby Day for dental students was my first event. During the spring of my sophomore year, I made the trip to Atlanta to actively participate in advocating for my future profession. The “Great Atlanta Ice Storm of 2014” foiled the event my freshman year, so I was doubly eager to attend. Engaging with lawmakers forced me to really understand the issues facing dentistry, and it is an experience that every dental student and dentist should take advantage of at least once in his or her career.

What do you enjoy doing in your spare time?
I’ve always loved sports, so I still enjoy getting out and playing whatever I can with whomever I can. As a proud UGA alumnus, I of course make the pilgrimage back to Athens and other SEC schools in the fall to watch the Dawgs play. My love for finance is still alive as well, as I continue to manage my own investment portfolios, and my newfound love of acting has taken me to the sets of many television shows and movies including Hunger Games, Billy Lynn’s Long Halftime Walk, and Ant-Man and The Wasp. Lastly, my family and I are huge Disney fanatics. We’ve gone to Disney World between three and six times a year and it has truly become a home away from home for me.

What is your all time dream vacation?
If I were to design a dream vacation, it would start with a transatlantic Disney Cruise and then once we reached Europe, spend a few weeks (or months… after all, this is a “dream” vacation right?) following Rick Steves around Europe.

Without saying “I am a dentist,” what would you say if someone asked what you do?
Thanks to I-85 burning down last year and derailing plans to live with a great friend near Ponce City Market, I have the ultimate cover story when I meet people. I get to say, “I work for my parents, and I live with them, too.”

In your opinion, what is the single most important thing GDA can do to help members?
“Keep dentistry in the hands of dentists.” Any industry is subject to the rules and regulations imposed on it by the government, irrespective of the knowledge lawmakers possess about the industry. It is our responsibility as dentists to work with the legislators, serving as advisory and sounding boards for them, on issues pertaining to our profession and our patients.

What was your first job?
As is the case with many children of dentists, my first job outside the house was at my parents’ office: vacuuming, taking the trash out, and the like.

What advice would you give to a dental student?
Be involved in a student organization. ASDA is obviously the one closest to my heart, but SNDA, HSDA, SPEA, and many others are excellent organizations as well. They will all open your eyes to the importance organized dentistry plays in our profession and will make you a much more well-rounded dentist when you graduate from dental school.
